

Me and the Babbie

And in the mornins, we walked about, sometimes intae toon if it wis rainin, but maistly tae the park, me tellin him about the daffodils comin oot and the leaves on the trees. Ah'd have tellt him mair about the flooers and the trees but ah never knew their names. Ah 'd take pieces wi me and eat them in the park, sittin on a bench. Ah fed him as well, wrapped up in a shawl wi ma jaicket roon me so naebdy could see whit ah wis daein. We stayed oot as long as we could so's no tae run up the heatin bills - the flat's all eletric and it's dear. At night we wrapped up warm thegither in bed and ah watched TV and fed him and he dozed and fed till ah pit oot the light, then he fed and slept till the morn.

And wan day wis much like another. Sometimes ah wis bored or tired or desperate for a cuppa tea and ah could of wept. Sometimes ah did have a wee greet, on ma ain, at night. But ah'd decided tae dae whatever it wis that would keep him happy, however strange it seemed tae other folk. For whit else wis there but me and the babbie. And he wis happy, hardly grat. But they couldnae leave me alane.

Ma mammy said it's no natural, the way thon wean gets treated.

Ma daddy said he should be sleepin in his ain cot.

Ma sister said you need a night oot, ah'll babysit fur ye.

A night oot - daein whit? Gaun tae the dancin wi a pack a daft lassies?
